also have been driven to the brink of extinction, and that this small-scale programme of captive breeding not only guarantees young pandas, it puts the very survival of the species at risk. Dr Sarah Reuell, director of Conservation Education at the Chengde Research Base of Giant Panda Breeding, told The Mail on Sunday that captive bred pandas are no more than a 'reserve' of the real thing and are unable to survive in the wild. Many believe their natural habit continues to decline as an alarming rate, and pressure from industrial development and the 'aging list' of Chinese tourists
